

THE TARIFF IN THE SENATE.

NO PROGRESS MADE ON THE FINANCE COMMITTEE'S BILL.

That seems to have dropped out of sight, and all the talk centers on a compromise bill that somebody is supposed to be preparing. Mr. Hale, who is the author of the bill, is in a position to make a statement on it. He is in a position to make a statement on it. He is in a position to make a statement on it.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—A call of the Senate today was again resorted to this morning to secure the attendance of the members for the regular proceedings of the day were begun. A request for unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of a private bill on the calendar was objected to by Mr. Hale (Rep., Me.) on the ground that after the morning business each day the remainder of the morning hour—really two hours—might be spent in the regular consideration of business on the calendar.

A few minutes afterward the Vice-President announced that morning business was disposed of, and thereupon, at 11:30 A. M., Mr. Harris (Dem., Tenn.) moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the Tariff bill. In response to a request by Mr. Hale (Rep., N. H.) to allow some business on the calendar to be taken up, Mr. Harris remarked that the disposition of the Tariff bill was of vastly more importance than the consideration of all the bills on the calendar put together, and he insisted on his motion.

"Are we not allowed," Mr. Hale said in response, "to have some business transacted in the morning hour independent of the Tariff bill? I realize as fully as the Senator from Tennessee the necessity of acting promptly on that measure and am perfectly willing to go to work at 10 o'clock in the morning and continue to work up to 12 or 12:30 o'clock at night. The Senator from Tennessee has my sympathy to a great extent."

The question was taken on Mr. Harris's motion, and it was agreed to: Yea, 31; nay, 10. So the Senate at 11:45 proceeded to the consideration of the Tariff bill.

Mr. Hale then moved as to the parliamentary status of the bill, and was informed by the Vice-President that it was being considered in the Committee of the Whole, the pending question being the first amendment, to change the date when the bill is to go into effect from the 1st of the 30th of June, 1894, to the 1st of the 1st of January, 1895.

"I do not believe," Mr. Hale continued, "that the Senator from Tennessee knows what is going on in by-ways and corners and holes in the wall, in which an attempt is being made to do a bill that will gain the votes of more Senators than are now prepared to vote for it. I have here evidence to the contrary. I have here evidence to the contrary. I have here evidence to the contrary."

Mr. Hale then read the clerk's first of his papers, which was an interview with Senator Harris on the subject of the Tariff bill. He then read the second of his papers, which was an interview with Senator Harris on the subject of the Tariff bill. He then read the third of his papers, which was an interview with Senator Harris on the subject of the Tariff bill.

CRANKS AT GRACE CHURCH. Harmless for the Most Part, but the Last One Broke Some Glass. Grace Church in Broadway is open all day and occasionally it is visited by such a crank as said his respects to the door of the church house on Thursday evening, last, when he was told that the church was closed.

"What do you want?" asked Mr. Partridge, catching him by the arm. "I want the priest," said the man, excitedly. "I want the priest," said the man, excitedly. "I want the priest," said the man, excitedly.

Just at that moment Dr. Huntington came along, and, suspecting that the man was insane, led him out of the church. A large crowd had collected. The insane man did not resist. Mr. Partridge led the man up to Thirteenth street and Fourth avenue, and turned him over to a policeman. When the man was committed to the asylum at Bellevue Hospital, he said he was John Sullivan and had no home.

About a week ago a middle-aged man, long, thin, and looking like a man who had been in the army, came to the church and said he was John Sullivan and had no home. ## GERMAN SENTIMENT DIVIDED AS TO THE PROPER POLICY.

Some Wish to Start a German Protectorate and Others to Let New Zealand Have Her Way—May Day Celebrations—Advocate Office Some More Astonishing Revelations—Americans in Berlin.

BERLIN, April 28.—German politicians and officials are asking what shall be done with Samoa. The question is regarded with profound indifference by the general public, but as it is the only political topic of any present importance it has been less than a godsend to the media editors, who have been driven to their wits' ends for high politics during the even dullness of the last week.

Opinion on the Samoan question is sharply divided. There are many who wish the Government to rid itself of all further entanglement in Samoa affairs and to confine its colonial empire to the German colonies. There are others who argue strongly for a German protectorate, on the ground that German trade preponderates in the islands. The persons who are tired of the everlasting friction at Apia with New Zealand's offer to take charge of Samoa as a lucky escape from further vexation.

The colonial enthusiasts, however, profess to be amazed by the Wellington Government's impudence. They are in the minority, but they make up for their numerical weakness by continuous shouting. The kernel of the party is the group headed by the Colonialist. Round it have been gathered the National Liberal and the Conservative editors, and their political backers. Their clamor abated somewhat early in the week, but was stimulated again by the report that the Emperor had told his Minister of Foreign Affairs not to lessen Germany's hold on Samoa.

Beyond question the sober judgment of the majority is voiced by the Vossische Zeitung, which regards Germany's position in Samoa as very unsatisfactory. The empire can win no honor there in any event, it says, and all the trouble and expense can be saved by simply guarding under a foreign protectorate. The Vossische Zeitung pronounces decidedly in favor of an English rather than an American protectorate, as England would not only secure German interests more satisfactorily, but also might grant Germany some equivalent in Africa.

Several newspapers have noted the interesting fact that this Samoan agitation has begun exactly ten years since Prince Bismarck sent to the German Consul in Cape Town the famous despatch instructing him to announce the German claim to Samoa. The despatch, it is pointed out, was a masterpiece of German diplomacy, and it is a pity that things have gone so badly, mixed with gratitude occasionally because they have gone so badly. The German claim to Samoa remains in its entirety connected with the present Bismarck warship for Count Hatzfeldt's mission to the Samoan islands.

PRODUCE STOPS IN JERSEY CITY. Commission Men Object to the Pennsylvania Road's New System. For a week beginning with last Monday, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has been refusing to receive Southern farm produce for delivery in this city, has made all deliveries in Jersey City, and is now making this its policy for the future, and has thereby raised a tremendous kick and protest from the produce commission trade of this city.

On the part of the road it may be said that it has built large covered platforms at the foot of Bay street, in Jersey City, and is now making this its policy for the future, and has thereby raised a tremendous kick and protest from the produce commission trade of this city.

Heretofore, nearly all the Southern produce has come to this city and has been delivered at the water side of Jersey City, and is now making this its policy for the future, and has thereby raised a tremendous kick and protest from the produce commission trade of this city.

Because of this concentration of these goods the custom has been for the commission men to load the produce in the trucks, and to take it to the warehouse, and then to take it to the market. The Pennsylvania road is higher than these by the steamer line, but this was offset by the fact that the road had a better system of trucks, and the produce was delivered at the water side of Jersey City, and is now making this its policy for the future, and has thereby raised a tremendous kick and protest from the produce commission trade of this city.

There was a time when the produce was delivered at the water side of Jersey City, and is now making this its policy for the future, and has thereby raised a tremendous kick and protest from the produce commission trade of this city.
